How do Black Lives Matter, globally, especially in countries in conflict?

Project Title	How do Black Lives Matter, globally, especially in countries in conflict?
Project Summary	In this time of Black Lives Matter protest in the United States, the US Agency for International Development (USAID) is interested in working with VSFS on a comparative analysis of racial (and/or ethnicity) justice in the US vs developing world, with an emphasis on countries in conflict/crisis.
Country	United States

Project Description

How do labels about race or ethnicity influence USAID's work? How do they box us in (while others enable) differently in the US vs developing world? How do we best seek social and environmental justice in this space? How can such learning help influence multi-national exchanges globally?

Required Skills or Interests

Skill(s)
Cultural diplomacy
Research
Website design
Writing

Additional Information

If you choose to join us, you could contribute to a team of Africa experts on countering violent extremism, environmental justice and women's empowerment. We would like for you to choose one region in Africa, and would connect you with country experts.

Language Requirements

None